♦ Miss Annie Lloyd, 17, Cincinnati. ♦ Fast trains No. 5, westbound, and No. 6, eastbound, on the Baltimore and Ohio, collided near the Caseyville switch, a few miles from East St. Louis, shortly after noon yesterday. L. B. List, the engineer on the westbound train was killed. Henry Borders was the engineer on the eastbound train. This is the second time these two engineers have been in the same wreck. About twelve years ago their trains collided at Odin, Ill., beause of a mistake in ordera. Those who were hurt were all on the westbound train. The crew of the eastsound train saved their lives by jumping. An investigation is being made by the officials to determine who is responsible for the accident. The westbound train was about forty five minutes late and the eastbound train had orders to take the siding at Casey-had orders to take the siding at Caseyville and give it the right of way. At Caseyville the track winds through the bluffs. For this reason the railroad men cennot see very far ahead of them.

It is believed that L. B. Sist, the dead engineer, thought that the other train had had plenty of time to take the siding and that the track was clear.

The collision occurred just as the eastbound train was slowing up to back into the siding. The railroad crew of the eastbound train, heard the rumble of the westbound train, and Engineer Henry Borders reversed his locomotive and pulled the whistle, shouting to his fireman to jump.
The men got out of the locomotive just Lowden, a brakeman, and John Fontano, a baggageman, were badly hurt in the baggage car.

In the dining car Mrs. Thomas Rouse, 70 years old, of Cincinnati, and Miss Carrie, the II-year-old daughter of J. J. Lloyd of Cincinnati, were eating. They were thrown against the dining tables and badly hurt.

The train crews and passengers immediately after the collision, made a search for the engineers and firemen of the two trains. List was found half buried between his locomotive and the tender. He was still alive, but died before Doctor H. C. Fairbrother and his staff of surgeons from East St. Louis arrived.

The surgeons attended to the injured and sent Garland, Fontano and Louden to St. Mary's Hos-'tal, East St. Louis List's body was poved to Kurrus's morgus, where an nquest will be held this morning by C oner McCracken.

The body will be shipped to-morrow to Chillicothe, O., for burial.

In the baggage car of the eastbound train was the body of Mrs. E. M. Boothby of St. Louis. The casket was demolished and the body was taken from beneath a mass of trunks. It was removed to Kurrus's undertaking establishment in East St. Louis and again prepared for shipment to Newport, Ky.

When he reached a joint in the wire the insulation proved defective, and he received the full current of 500 volts.

The accident occurred about fifty feet frot his home. Louis Meyer and Henry Ulten witnessed the accident, and ran to the boy's rescue. When they reached him he was dead. A physician tried in vain to revive him.

The wire was the property of the Belleville Gus and Electric Light Company.

At the office yesterday it was said that the officials had not been notified that the wire was down, and, as it had not grounded, they did not know that it had fallen.

Had Only Life Interest in Property-Administrator Must Untangle Snarl.

Administrator Mast Untangle Snarl.

A queer tangle resulted yesterday when Judge Charles S. White of the Probate Court of Jersey County, appointed the same man administrator of two estates that are practically one. The appointment was made in the application for letters of administration of the estate of Miss Lydia Twitchell, who died at Kemper in March.

Miss Twitchell lived with her sister, Miss Maria Twitchell, and brother, Gaston D. Twitchell. None ever had married. Miss Maria was the first to die, and several years later Gaston D. died. In his will he bequeathed a life interest in the estate to his sisters, appointing Lydia executrix. Mis Maria having died the life interest fell to Lydia.

The sister proceeded to settle up the estate, which amounted to Si4,000, and made distributions to the children of her married brothers and sisters.

When application was made yesterday for letters of administration on the estate of Lydia Twitchell the court found that she had distributed the estate in which she had only a life interest, and that in the distribution she had given away some of her personal funds, not having made the distinction.

Judge White accordingly appointed John

Judge White accordingly appointed John T. Ryan as administrator of the estate of Lydia Twitchell, and also appointed Ryan as the administrator, with will annexed, of the estate of Gaston D. Twitchell. The heirs in each case are identical, but the double administration was made necessary to unravel the legal taurie. to unravel the legal tangle

HAPPENINGS IN ILLINOIS CITIES AND TOWNS WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEMORABLE CELEBRATION AT THE FAIR ISSUES STATEMENT

Officers and prize winners of the Washington University Law Class graduated yesterday.

Commencement Exercises of the Undergraduate and Law Departments at the Odeon Followed by an Interesting Programme at Festival Hall and Merry Banquets on "The Pike" at Night.

It was "Washington University Alumni Day" at the Fair yesterday. Though the graduating exercises were held at the Odeon in the morning the alumni, with the day's strong re-enforcement, continued a varied programme at Festival Hall in the afternoon and closed it with a series of Edward Faul Evering—Kurt Toensfelt, In Electrical Engineering—Kurt Toensfelt, In Electrical Engineering—Leroy Vernon Cram, Edward Faul Evers. Day" at the Fair yesterday. Though the graduating exercises were held at the the day's strong re-enforcement, continued a varied programme at Festival Hall in the afternoon and closed it with a series of dinners at well-known restaurants on the Pike at night, while the undergraduates paraded that thoroughfare singing college glees and giving college yells that made the Pike "barker" envious.

The mrytle and marcon colors of the university were everywhere in evidence and graduating day for the class of 1904 was certainly an event in 'varsity annals, There was a large gathering at the Odeon in the morning, when the graduating exercises were opened by a prayer by the Reverend William D. Bradfield, D. D. On the platform were W. S. Chaplin, chancellor of the university, and the faculty of the undergraduate and law departments.

the undergraduate and law departments.

"The Man Gladstone" was the subject of the first oration, by Arthur Edward Dennis, candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He spoke of the personal side of Gladstone's varied life, on his deep religious convictions and his home life, as well as his parliamentary career. He spoke of his vast literary attainments and pointed out how great a part his scholarship occupied in making up the "Grand Old Man" of England.

"Isthmian Canalis" was the timely subject of John Charles Pritchard's essay. He received the degree of Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, and his paper on that most interesting and important of all recent engineering problems proved his qualifications.

"The Future of Our University" was selected by Miss Helen Elizabeth Woods as the subject of her oration, wherein she portrayed in hopeful terms the possibilities for the young men and young women of the great West through the advancement of their alma mater.

The law department had the last but by no means the least important place on the programme. Charles Martin Hay selected "Lynch Law" as his topic, and he argued up to what he believed the inevitable misfortune that would follow attempts to supersede the regular course of the law, no matter how vexatious the delay of that law may be.

Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard was received with a storm of applause. His subject was "The Unity of Knowledge." This vast subject Professor Munsterberg treated in his own masterful manner, proceeding on the broad basis that all scientific research, no matter how diversified the field, tended to the general advancement of mankind, and had this binding, unifying element through it all. It was an elaborate and philosophical discussion, listened to with the keenest attention.

After several music numbers by Mr. Galloway, Calvin M. Woodward dean of the school of engineering, spoke on "The Physical Side of Education."

Professor Woodward pointed to the necessity of physical culture in the university, in order that a proper balance might be maintained between mind and body.

There was near by a great stadium, and in it would be given during the summer many interesting exhibitions of manual achievements. He held that it was well that such an institution should be connected with every university, He did not know whose name the future stadium of Washington University would bear, but an endowment of $59,000 would go a long way towards entitling any member of the Alumni Association to that distinction.
